VISITS TO ECTON - SAFETY INSTRUCTIONS

1. Landowners welcome careful visitors to the many footpaths and public access land on the hill. There are also many potentially hazardous shafts and hollows - the relics of hundreds of years of copper mining. With the help of dozens of volunteers we are trying to preserve many features above and below ground where we enjoy access to 2 listed ancient monuments and 3 Sites of Special Scientific Interest (SSSI) which are subject to a duty of care by all visitors.
2. For your own safety please KEEP CLEAR of all shafts and fences.
3. NEVER DROP stones or other objects down any shaft. For many years the underground workings at Ecton have been used by students and researchers. Even a small pebble falling hundreds of metres could cause great danger to those below. PLEASE DO NOT RISK HUMAN LIFE. Help us to keep Ecton a safe place for learning.
4. Safety is our prime objective on both surface and underground visits. The workings are in good competent limestone - no timbering is needed for support - but no hammering or collecting of rocks or minerals is permitted underground. Please note:
 - Do not climb on or interfere with any safety barriers or fences.
 - Only one person at a time on a walkway or bridge.
 - Do not wander away from your group.
 - Always comply with directions or advice from your group leader.

All visitors are required to complete this form with their name and signature to declare they have read and understood the above requirements
